“ To my Dad, my hero.

You were one of the greatest Dads a girl could ask for. You were a hard working, generous and brutally honest man, to a fault. You were always there when we needed you but you also encouraged us that we could do anything we set our minds to.

My dad was a fighter. He worked and fought hard for what he had in life. You fought to stay with your family as long as you could until your body just overcame your will. You are the example your girls measure the merit of a man and a father against. You showed us what it looked like to cherish and commit yourself to your spouse and to love them fiercely.

Dad, I will miss you so very much. I close my eyes and I can see a life time of memories which I will cherish forever. I got my love of the written word and books from you. I share your love of the smell of a brand new book. I have your stubbornness, even though you liked to blame Mom, we all know where it truly came from. And we all know where the "Powell" eyebrow raise comes from.

Until I see you "up above", Dad. I love you.

“ When we talk about what a hero is, my brother Stephen stands at the top of that list. He is the unsung hero, never wanting any attention drawn to himself but always there when help was needed. His bravery and positive attitude this past year has been amazing. He kept going even when he felt like giving up. I am going to miss him and our chats about the meaning of life and our purpose for being here on this earth. He and his beautiful wife, Kim were such a wonderful example of how a couple should be, they were each others best friend. I love you brother and know that we shall meet again. "May God Be With You Until We Meet Again". Love your sis. Sheila
