“ So hard to say goodbye to one of my lifelong best friends. Too many memories in our 65 years as friends, but one that stands out is the very first. I remember the day we met. We were both 7 years old & she had just moved in across the street from me. She was this very petite blond, watering the lawn. She was also quite shy as I approached her. However, when she spoke, she had a thick Southern drawl that I had never heard before. It was charming & she lost it as the years went by. Though life took us far apart in geography, that strong bond remained. I will always miss my friend. Lisa, Sherry, & Sheila, you have my deepest sorrow for your loss.
