“ Kelly was a friend even before I met her brother Randy, so we go way back. She was always so much fun to be around so many memories but many more laughs and joyful times. The last few conversations we had was always me trying to convince her to please be strong and get well so she could come visit and I do believe she did just that, but her poor body was tired. I never once thought she wouldn't make it through this health issue after making it through so many. I am thankful that we always prayed together, and I always told her that I loved her at the end of each conversation. We I have no doubt will be together again. I love you forever my sweet sister.
