“ Mom was not someone I got a chance to know well in my childhood years . Events and the right combination of the wrong people didn't allow for it . It's said that God has a plan and purpose for us all and I do believe this to be true . A person can go insane trying to figure out where they fit in what was they key purpose to their existence and where they made a difference . In my mothers case in closing out her life and dealing with the finalization of her personal belongings and business everywhere I went she was known and people was shocked to see she was never coming back to see them . Complete strangers knew my mom perhaps better than even I did and missed her mourning her passing . The only thing I knew about my mother before this day was I knew she loved me and was proud of me and I loved her to but after this day I seen that she had touched a lot of people's lives more than I ever realized and each experience a good one so at very least I can say maybe possibly her purpose was to just be there for others and to take situations and people at face value . I'm proud of my mom in the friends she made and lives she touched I wish I knew her better but it's my turn to be proud of her and to take her life and the knowledge I've gathered and treat the people in my life with a sense of understanding no matter the story that follows them before they found my door step .
