“ I think of my beloved brother, Martin, every day. He had a unique and personal style and a way of living his life that touched many hearts. His friendly personality drew people to him. He especially liked children and helping family. Martin was known to go over and above in helping family and strangers alike. Whether it was repairing a tool or just sharing stories, he had a unique quiet and sincere style about him.

I will forever remember him appearing at my doorstep with a red wagon for Michele and a bowl of fruit for the family when my daughter, Marie Carol, was born. It was not like him to show such outward sentiment, and that is why this was such a special moment. He was always there to help our non-mechanical family repair machinery and cars. The girls knew that if ever they needed help, they could call on “Uncle Martin.” As everyone got older and distance became an issue, we saw less and less of Martin. I am so happy that I was able to see and talk to him shortly before his death. He lives in my heart forever!
