“ Weston would be quiet and reserved each time when all the family would get together, but that would not last long. Something active would always make him spring to action. Maybe it was the Rockstar energy drink. Who knows? And in the action he would surprise you with his talent and skill. His athleticism and also his sense of humor. Like others mentioned before there was a good amount of truth that he spoke. Truth about a situation that might help put you in your place, or just say the thing that we were all thinking. I love Weston like I do my entire family and he will be dearly missed, but never forgotten. May the cliffs be higher, the water glassier, the cars faster, the hunting perfect, the disc golf course pristine, and the pain gone. We love you.

“ I was always in competition to be better than him in sports and hunting. He always got the bigger fish, deer and was better at wake boarding.

“ I taught Weston to play disc golf, and even though I had years of experience before him, he had a hole in 1 long before me. And a second, third, 4th.....
